

To Whom It May Concern;

It is a pleasure to write a reference letter for Vicki Dunnam. I first met Vicki when she was employed by McMurry University as the on-line learning specialist and later she became the Director of Online Education. Vicki was instrumental in helping me transition my course from the standard classroom to a more technological advanced course, which the students found engaging, which enhanced their learning. The transition was helpful for me as well, as I became more computer knowledgeable by working with Vicki. Vicki was well respected during her tenure at McMurry and many were saddened by her departure, of which I was one.

Vicki is well educated and informed regarding the various on-line learning platforms utilized in education. If a problem arose, it took little time before she discovered the answer and implemented the solution. Not only was she a good problem solver, she was also quite progressive and pushed the boundaries of on-line education, continually challenging me. Vicki's expertise was known throughout campus, she was called upon by countless faculty and staff for help and guidance, which she readily gave. Vicki was a role model and example for her peers and colleagues.

Vicki embodies passion and intelligence. She is both diligent in her work and cared for her colleagues. She enjoys a challenge and promotes active discussion and learning. Vicki would be a talented asset. I am happy to recommend Vicki for your current position and hope you give serious consideration to her.

Sincerely,

Janet McMurray DAT, ATC/LAT
